

sometimes I would close them when I knew I wouldn't use them any more in the evening; sometimes I wouldn't think to close them until I was all through fishing and ready to go to bed. Now, do you want the next day?

Q Well, before you go on to that, I would like to get an idea of the cars, the automobiles that you had and the makes and condition of all that sort of thing.

A The cars that I had at that time, my own car was a Ford station wagon. The parts that are ordinarily painted black in a Ford, such as the mud guards and the hood and the radiator edges around the radiator and the axles were painted chocolate color to match the color of the leather of the seats. The car had natural wood rims, natural wood demountable rims; it had no speedometer and it was in very rickety shape.

Q How long had you had it?

A I had it three years. I had it a year and I think it was repainted after the first year, and I don't think it was ever repainted again and certainly wasn't washed in those two years anyway. I just got it for rough use. I would jump into it, go down to the railroad station, to the post office or to the stores in town and do errands with it and it was being used all the time, principally around the town there and I know it was about played out and that we would say "Well, if it will stick through while
